

The Leader of Managers

Elevate the leadership skills of your multi-unit managers

"MMU draw from their extensive experience to provide practical advice and proven strategies for managing diverse teams, operational disciplines, and delivering operational efficiencies.

Their insights into maintaining high standards, driving performance, and fostering team development are invaluable for achieving operational excellence."

Rob Hodges, Managing Director, Mission Coffee Works

The Leader of Managers

Elevate the leadership skills of your multi-unit managers

In today's fast-paced and financially challenging hospitality and retail sectors, the role of a multi-unit manager has never been more critical, or more complex.

With rising cost pressures, shifting customer expectations, and the need to grow top-line revenue while protecting margins, businesses are relying more than ever on their multi-unit leaders to deliver across all fronts. These managers must not only lead diverse teams across multiple locations, but also ensure consistently exceptional guest experiences, unlock local sales opportunities, and keep a tight grip on operational costs.

Common Challenges Faced by Multi-Unit Managers

1. Competing demands and priorities

Multi-unit managers often struggle to juggle competing demands across locations, resulting in poor planning and prioritisation. This can lead to a lack of focus on critical business goals, leaving teams under-resourced and disengaged.

2. Underperformance and missed opportunities

Without proactive management, underperformance and inconsistencies at individual sites can go unnoticed or unaddressed for too long. This not only affects the bottom line but also erodes team morale and customer satisfaction across the area.

3. Disconnected teams and remote leadership

Leading from a distance makes it difficult to foster meaningful connections with managers and their teams. Without a strong leadership presence, multi-unit managers may struggle to align their teams to business objectives, resulting in a lack of commitment and, ultimately, disengaged teams.

At Mastering Multi-Units (MMU), we understand that multi-unit managers are the heart of your business. They're the ones turning strategy into action on the ground; responsible for driving growth, maintaining brand standards, and sustaining performance across every site. And yet, many are expected to achieve all of this with limited development or support, often leading to frustration, burnout, and missed opportunities.

We understand these challenges. For over a decade, we've worked closely with multi-unit managers in hospitality, retail, and other industries, helping them overcome these obstacles and unlock their full potential.

Your Trusted Guide in Developing Multi-Unit Leaders

At MMU, we are more than just a training provider. We are your trusted partner in developing the next generation of multi-unit leaders.

The Leader of Managers open programme is specifically tailored to address the complexities of leading remote teams across multiple locations.

This year-long, in-depth journey combines proven leadership models with practical, real-world application, ensuring that your managers gain the skills they need to excel.

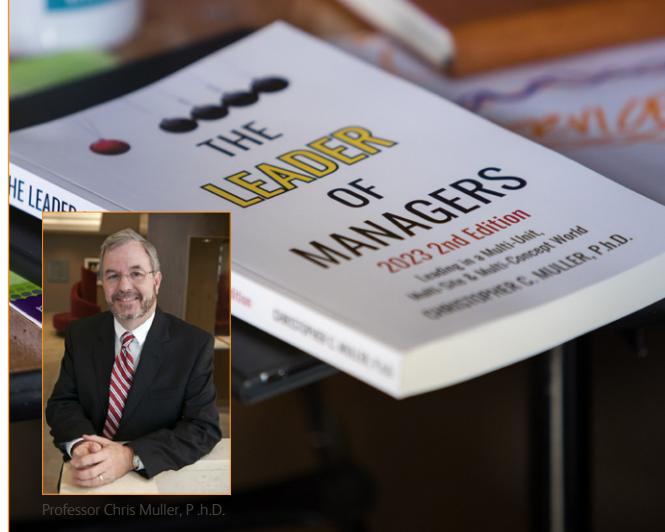

At the heart of the programme is a dual focus: the operational demands of multi-unit management and the adaptive leadership required to succeed. We bring to life the work of Professor Chris Muller, the renowned expert in multi-unit management, whose decades of research explore how leaders can effectively balance consistency and adaptability across different locations.

His book, The Leader of Managers, outlines the essential competencies and strategic insights needed to thrive in this demanding role, and we've built our programme around these principles.

Alongside this, we are proud to include SLII[®], the world's most widely taught leadership model, as a core part of the programme. As authorised channel partners of Blanchard, we provide multi-unit managers with a shared language and leadership framework that helps them match their style to the needs of each individual and situation.

This powerful combination of academic insight and practical behavioural tools ensures participants don't just understand what great leadership looks like – they know how to apply it consistently across their teams.

The Leader of Managers programme is designed specifically to equip leaders and managers with the skills and strategies needed to thrive in today's competitive environment.

“Taking part in The Leader of Managers programme has been inspiring, interesting, and has helped me develop my skills as a multi-site leader; further than what I would learn on the job alone. Lee, Daniel and David are fantastic presenters who are super passionate about what they do, and to have such a wide base of knowledge available is extremely beneficial. I feel more confident, knowledgeable and positive about my role and the development of myself, my business and my team. This is a great investment for anyone in the industry!”

Jade Ponomarenko, Operations Manager, Old Spike Roastery

The Plan for Success

At the heart of our programme is The Mastering Multi-Units Model™, a framework designed to drive operational excellence through four key disciplines.

- 1. Clarity of expectations: this includes brand standards and ways of working, continuous review and improvement, and accountability for resolution.
- 2. The period review: covering analysis and commentary by the manager, mitigating issues and exploiting opportunities, and manager and team growth/succession.
- 3. Proactive planning: focusing on quantifiable priorities, identifying high-leverage activities and going beyond SMART objectives.
- 4. Critical impact visits: involving a review of action plan implementation, asking better questions and creating a culture of exceptional service.

In our experience, these operational disciplines aren't a buffet where you can choose only a few. To truly transform your managers into world-class leaders, they need consistent attention across all these disciplines.

The Mastering Multi-Units Model™

Why Invest in Your Multi-Unit Managers?

The Leader of Managers programme is an investment in your company's future.

By equipping your multi-unit managers with the tools and strategies to thrive, you'll see improvements in team performance, operational efficiency, and overall business growth.

As the hospitality and retail landscape continues to evolve, the need for strong, adaptive leadership has never been greater. Don't leave your managers to figure it out on their own. Invest in their development and watch as they transform into leaders who drive success across your entire organisation.

This course, delivered at various points throughout a 12-month period, is tailored to address the unique challenges of managing multi-unit operations.

Unlike general management training, this programme focuses on:

- Developing leadership skills – learn how to inspire and lead managers to drive performance and align their teams with your company's vision
- Enhancing strategic thinking – equip your leaders with the tools to make informed decisions, optimise operations, and respond to industry trends
- Building high-performing teams – master the art of coaching and mentoring managers to cultivate a culture of excellence and accountability
- Driving growth and innovation – foster innovation by encouraging creative problem-solving and proactive leadership among your management teams.

Programme Structure

Are you ready to elevate your team's leadership?

Let MMU guide you through this journey and ensure your business is equipped to thrive in a competitive and ever-changing marketplace.

Our programme is meticulously crafted to address the core competencies required for high-impact leadership in multi-unit operations. Participants will benefit from a blend of in-person training, personalised coaching, and interactive online learning, all designed to ensure practical and sustained application of the concepts.

1. Being The Leader of Managers (two-day in-person workshop)

Master the art of leading through others by developing the skills to inspire and guide your management team. Build a leadership style that fosters trust, accountability, and high performance across all levels.

- How to be an outstanding multi-unit manager: mindset, skillset, and toolset
- Explore Professor Chris Muller's Phases of Multi-Unit Management Development, identify the warning signs of falling into the 'Super Operator Trap', and learn how to avoid these behaviours
- Understand the challenges of remote management and the core behaviours that define world-class remote leadership
- Blanchard SLII® (Situational Leadership) – learn the world-renowned SLII® framework to adapt your leadership style based on the needs of your team members. Diagnose and adjust your approach depending on the task or goal
- The Mastering Multi-Units Model™ introduction – clarity of expectations, period reviews, proactive planning, and critical impact visits
- The first operational discipline: clarity of expectations – focus on what's non-negotiable versus what's optional. Ensure your teams understand the standards that must be met, who is responsible for delivering them, and by when. Most importantly, help them connect to the 'why' behind the 'what' and the 'how'.

2. Ops Disciplines – Period Review (three x two-hour virtual learning sessions)

Implement a structured review processes to monitor progress and make data-driven decisions.

- These periodic reviews, between multi-unit and site managers, must cover all the operational lenses:
 - Team member growth
 - Quality of operations
 - Customer experience
 - Financial/KPI results
- Apply the Three 'I's model – Incident, Impact, Insight – to help the GM analyse events and extract valuable lessons to replicate successes or prevent future issues
- Examine the skills, knowledge, and behaviours of the GM and their team by utilising the People Inventory and reviewing core competencies
- Implement the Rule of 7 team development plan to establish a meaningful succession strategy, enhancing the capabilities and experiences of the GM and their team.

3. Blanchard Essential Motivators

(one-hour self-learning plus 90-minute small group debrief)

Essential Motivators™ is a powerful and practical framework that helps leaders and teams uncover their core psychological needs, values, and behaviours. It provides valuable insight into individual motivation – one of the two key factors that make up commitment in the SLII® diagnostic process. It helps leaders better understand what drives their people and how to support them effectively.

Based on over 40 years of research by Linda Berens, this session offers a simple yet deeply effective tool for improving collaboration, empathy, and self-awareness.

Participants will:

- Discover their own Essential Motivators pattern (Earth, Air, Fire, or Water) and gain insights into their natural strengths, needs, and communication style
- Explore how these motivators influence workplace behaviour, leadership style, and decision-making
- Recognise patterns in others to better understand their colleagues and build stronger relationships
- Learn how to manage stress and identify personal 'shadows' that may show up under pressure
- Build a more inclusive and empathetic approach to teamwork and leadership.

4. Ops Disciplines – Proactive Planning

(three x two-hour virtual learning sessions)

Develop robust plans that anticipate challenges and seize opportunities for growth.

- Review performance of key performance indicators to identify the 'Big Rocks'
- Formation of the Quarterly Big Rock Action Plan to drive performance across KPIs
- Once core goals have been identified:
 - Determine quantifiable measures of success
 - Pinpoint key proactive actions that individuals can consistently take to maximise their chances of success
 - Establish accountability by defining when these actions will occur, who will be responsible for them, and how frequently they will be carried out
- Successful succession planning – the People Inventory and the Rule of Seven.

5. Full Focus Productivity (three x two-hour virtual learning sessions)

"Intend your time, spend your time and defend your time if you want to achieve the double win; to win at work and succeed at life!"

– Michael Hyatt, Founder and CEO, Full Focus Company

- The Eisenhower Time Matrix – developed over 50 years ago, this simple yet powerful model helps to prioritise your focus on what's important, not just what's urgent, and helps in taking a proactive approach to planning for the next 90 days
- Beyond SMART – more goal achievement than goal setting; we look beyond the SMART framework, and identify individual, specific steps that can be undertaken, and reviewed on a weekly basis to help deliver on the goals set
- Apply The Productivity Code – 60:30:10 – to structure planning activities, systematically linking daily tasks with quarterly objectives.

6. Ops Disciplines – Critical Impact Visits (three x two-hour virtual learning sessions)

Learn to conduct impactful visits, that focus on the delivery of the operational disciplines and that drive performance improvements.

- Planning and preparation – outline the necessary actions for both the multi-unit manager and site manager to optimise the visit
- Conducting the visit – determine the primary areas of focus, such as:
 - Evaluating the execution of operational priorities
 - Assessing progress on the Big Rock action plan
 - Observing the quality of the customer experience
 - Providing ongoing coaching to the manager and their teams, actively looking for opportunities to recognise and motivate them
- Complete the visit by providing feedback, setting commitments, and establishing accountability.

7. Wellbeing (three x two-hour virtual learning sessions)

Explore strategies to enhance both personal and team wellbeing, supporting sustained performance and resilience. Understand the connection between wellbeing and productivity, and learn how to create a healthy work environment.

- Develop self-care practices to promote wellbeing and prevent stress from escalating into overwhelm, burnout, or serious mental health issues
- Identify what causes stress by recognising triggers and high-pressure areas
- Detect key stressors affecting your team
- Build resilient teams equipped to navigate today's complex and uncertain world
- Approach team setbacks constructively.

8. Blanchard Conversational Capacity (one day in-person workshop)

Develops the skills to engage in open, honest, and constructive conversations, even under pressure. Enhances the ability to manage difficult discussions, keeping teams aligned and focused on shared goals.

- Build stronger communication and support
- Encourage the sharing of ideas, fostering creativity, innovation, and breakthroughs
- Close the gap between intended messages and received understanding, reducing confusion, improving accountability, and boosting productivity
- Transform meeting dynamics from competitive to cooperative
- Create a foundation of open and sincere communication, leading to higher morale.

9. Performance Coaching (one day in-person workshop)

Gain the tools to coach your managers effectively, helping them to unlock their full potential. Learn how to provide feedback that drives improvement and fosters a culture of continuous learning.

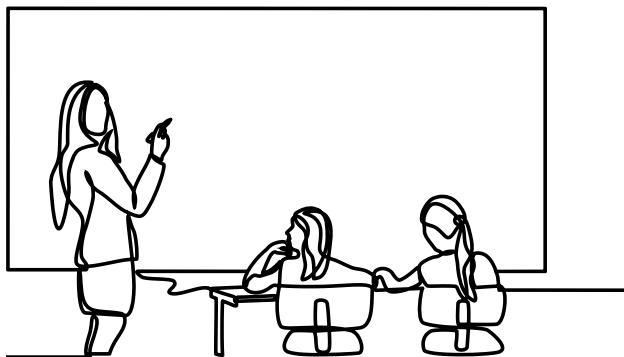

- Define performance coaching – developing talented performers and dealing with poor performance
- Implement the Performance Agreement tool to ensure clarity and accountability
- Apply the Difficult Conversation and Feedback planner tools, building confidence to raise issues of poor performance or concern
- Leverage the Radical Candour® framework to strike the right balance between challenging directly and caring personally, ensuring feedback is delivered with clarity, impact, and respect.

“This programme has been carefully designed to be relevant and helpful to our roles as multi unit managers. Lee and the team’s knowledge on all aspects of the role is second to none, using their depth of experience and established models to strengthen the foundations of the course. Every unit feels like something you can use to build structure within a business and help achieve the greatness we all strive to achieve.”

Zachary Silo, Area Manager, Heidi Bakery

Meet Your Facilitators

A team with one driving focus: to develop managers to be the best they can be, because everyone deserves to have an outstanding manager.

We all understand operations because we've all been there; on the frontline, working with diverse teams to make a difference and drive performance. Our practical experience and know-how, coupled with academic research and insights, helps us to take an objective and fresh perspective on the organisation and the capabilities of its managers.

Lee Sheldon

Lee brings a practical, real-world approach to leadership development, shaped by years of experience in frontline operations across both single-site and multi-unit roles. This insight underpins MMU's core belief that "the road to operational excellence is paved with discipline and consistency", a mantra that runs through everything Lee delivers.

As an authorised training partner of Blanchard, FranklinCovey, and The Full Focus Company, Lee blends world-class thinking with hands-on tools to help managers improve focus, lead with clarity, and boost both personal and professional productivity.

His leadership perspective was shaped during his time as Director of Learning and Development at SSP Group and has been refined over more than a decade through his work with Mastering Multi-Units. Today, he supports leaders across hospitality, retail, and leisure by challenging unhelpful habits and equipping them with the behaviours needed to succeed in complex, fast-paced environments.

Daniel Mills

Daniel is a learning and development professional with over 20 years' experience in hospitality and retail catering. He has supported the opening of over 50 diverse food and beverage retail operations and has improved the quality of multi-unit operations through his ability to challenge and develop the operational mindset of the multi-unit manager. His research into the challenges faced by the multi-unit population has helped MMU create learning interventions that promote operational excellence and individual growth.

Additionally, Daniel has trained and coached hundreds of people, from diverse industries and levels of managerial responsibility. Such interventions include supporting participants to maximise their 360-degree feedback insights, develop actionable career development objectives and enhance key competencies, particularly in relation to personal productivity, performance management and leadership.

David Blackmore

David is a versatile, highly successful operations manager with over 30 years of diverse experience within the hospitality, retail and coaching business. David's experience includes working with industry-leading brands, such as Mitchells & Butlers and Welcome Break, where he worked with a range of respected partner brands, including Starbucks, Waitrose and KFC. A highly motivational leader and mentor, David has a strong record of hands-on, cross-functional leadership. He effectively managed and built teams to maximise performance, streamline processes, and deliver operational excellence.

He brings deep experience in managing projects from initial design to completion while balancing stakeholder and client expectations. David is passionate about using his expertise and wealth of knowledge to help professionals, business owners and leaders to grow in knowledge, expertise, and efficiency so they can flourish. He firmly believes everyone deserves to have a great manager, and that everyone should have the opportunity to fully unleash their potential.
